(Historical Resources Act)

21/15

I, David Eggen, Minister of Culture and Tourism, pursuant to Section 20(15) of the Historical Resources Act, R.S.A. 2000 C. H-9, HEREBY RESCIND that portion of the Frank Slide Provincial Historic Resource designation dated December 14, 1995, registered in Alberta Land Titles as instrument 961 010 560, with respect to the lands legally described as Descriptive Plan 1313104, Block 6, Lot 26.

Dated at Edmonton, Alberta, this 1st day of November, 2015.

David Eggen, Minister of Culture and Tourism

Notice of Intention to Designate a Provincial Historic Resource

(Historical Resources Act)

File: Des. 2335

Notice is hereby given that sixty days from the date of service of this Notice and its publication in the Alberta Gazette, the Minister of Culture and Tourism intends to make an Order that the site known as the:

Government of Canada Building, together with the land legally described as:

Plan H

Block 18

Lot 20 to 29 inclusive

excepting thereout – all that portion of lot 29 which lies west of a line drawn from a point on the north boundary of the said lot 0.25 feet easterly from the north west corner thereof to a point on the south boundary of the said lot 0.17 feet easterly from the south west corner thereof excepting thereout all mines and minerals and municipally located in the City of Red Deer, Alberta be designated as a Provincial Historic Resource under Section 20 of the Historical Resources Act, RSA 2000 cH-9.

The reasons for the designation are as follows: The Government of Canada Building in Red Deer is significant as an excellent example of mid-twentieth century federal government architecture, for its association with the growth of federal government services and programs in the post-war period and for its association with Red Deer's emergence as one of Alberta's primary urban centres.

The Government of Canada Building is an excellent example of the type and style of buildings being designed and built by the federal government's Department of Public Works in the mid-twentieth century. The Government of Canada was establishing similar buildings in other centres across Canada from the late-1940s to the mid-1950s. Although there was no single standard plan for these buildings, they all featured a high degree of similarity in basic form, design and function. Designed in a simplified Classical Moderne style, these buildings retained their monumental appearance, but did away with the towers, arches and ornamentation that characterized government buildings of previous decades. Instead they focused on function and simplicity, demonstrated by strong vertical and horizontal lines; simple, stylized pilasters; and repeating, grid-like fenestration patterns. While many of the period's similar federal buildings were clad entirely in stone, the building in Red Deer, like two others in Quebec (Saint-Jérôme and Rimouski), features red brick walls and stone highlights. These contrasting materials further enhance the building's classical pedigree, although in a highly simplified, sleek and modern manner befitting the 1950s, successfully combining a forward-looking appearance and a sense of efficiency with the solidity and monumentality of traditional government building architecture.

The Government of Canada Building was constructed to provide a centralized location for the administration and delivery of Canada's growing social security system. The inter-war and post-war periods saw an expansion of existing national social security programs, such as old-age pensions, veteran's affairs and employment insurance, and the creation of new programs, notably family allowances. To provide local delivery of services and more efficient administration, the federal government combined these programs with other, more established services, such as the post office and the police services, in centralized administrative buildings located in medium-sized cities and regional service centres. Where necessary, such as in Red Deer and about 14 other centres across Canada, substantial, purpose-built government buildings were constructed to accommodate program staff in previously underserved areas. When the building opened in 1951, its main tenants were the Canadian Postal Service, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the Employment Insurance Commission, with space also provided for other services and departments, such as the Department of Agriculture, taxation offices, and customs and immigration services. A similar, but smaller federal building was also built in Grande Prairie. The building is an example of how Canada's expanding social security system was managed and delivered across the country and particularly in emerging centres such as Red Deer and Grande Prairie.

The Government of Canada Building in Red Deer replaced a smaller structure built in 1902, demonstrating that Red Deer was emerging as the primary service centre for the region. Since its incorporation as a city in 1913, Red Deer had remained small and lagged behind Alberta's other cities. Over the late-1940s and through the 1950s, Red Deer experienced tremendous growth in population and significance, primarily due to the discovery of oil in regions surrounding the city. The city's population doubled between 1945 and 1950 and nearly quadrupled by 1955. The building's presence in downtown Red Deer serves as tangible recognition of Red Deer's growth and significance.

It is therefore considered that the preservation and protection of the resource is in the public interest.

Dated this 3rd day of November, A.D. 2015.

Notice is hereby given that sixty days from the date of service of this Notice and its publication in the Alberta Gazette, the Minister of Culture and Tourism intends to make an Order that the site known as the:

Lethbridge Federal Building, together with the land legally described as:

Plan 4353S
Block 43
Lot 24 to 27 Inclusive
excepting thereout all mines and minerals and the right to work the same and municipally located in the City of Lethbridge, Alberta

be designated as a Provincial Historic Resource under Section 20 of the Historical Resources Act, RSA 2000 cH-9.

The reasons for the designation are as follows: The Lethbridge Federal Building is significant as an excellent example of pre-World War One monumental federal architecture. It also strongly reflects the expectations of Lethbridge's development into a major urban centre prior to World War One.

The Lethbridge Federal Building is architecturally significant as an excellent example of early twentieth-century monumental federal architecture. Built in 1912-13, the Lethbridge Federal Building was constructed during one of the most dynamic periods of public works construction in Canadian history (1900-14), when the federal government sought to establish a strong and visible presence in communities across the country. This was especially crucial in the new provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, where monumental federal buildings served as a powerful symbol of Canadian authority and the transition from frontier settlement to modern, urban development. Post offices were the signature buildings of this program, and the Lethbridge Federal Building shares many features that were common among federal post offices in this period, including the corner-lot siting, the stylistically-identical dual facades, and the corner clock tower. The building's Beaux Arts design with classical revival elements, such as rusticated stonework, alternating round and pedimented dormers on the upper level, and Ionic pilasters, convey a sense of stateliness, dignity and authority. The building thus met the functional need for improved postal facilities and expanded federal office space, but its design and construction clearly reflect the goals and priorities of federal public works architecture in the years leading up to World War One.

The building also reflects the expectations of Lethbridge's development into a major urban centre prior to World War One. Lethbridge's political and economic elite put significant pressure on the federal government to design a building worthy of the city's growing importance as a commercial and railway centre. The scale of the Lethbridge Federal Building is larger than what was necessary for a city the size of Lethbridge, an architectural choice that reflected the federal government's aspirations for the city's continued growth into a major urban centre. The building immediately became a local landmark and a source of pride for the people of Lethbridge, who viewed the monumental structure as a clear acknowledgement of their city's current importance and auspicious future. The city's growth stalled in the 1920s, but the Lethbridge Federal Building stands as a powerful symbol of the tremendous prosperity and boundless confidence of the pre-World War One boom years in Alberta.

It is therefore considered that the preservation and protection of the resource is in the public interest.

Dated this 3rd day of November, A.D. 2015.
